JUDGE GEORGE GRAY. The Former Senator from Delaware Slated for Member of International Peace Tribunal.

Judge George Gray, of Delaware, has been selected by the president to represent the United States on the permanent peace tribunal provided for by the congress at The Hague. Former President Benjamin Harrison was chosen some time ago.

JUDGE GEORGE GRAY. (American Member of the International Peace Tribunal.)

Judge Gray is the present United States judge for the Third judicial district. He was a member of the commission sent by the United States to Paris to deliberate upon the terms of peace at the close of hostilities in the Spanish-American war. At that time Judge Gray represented the state of Delaware in the United States senate, his term expiring in March, 1899. Altogether, he served three terms, or a continuous service of 18 years in the senate. He has been prominent as a democrat for many years, was a warm friend of the late Thomas Francis Bayard, and presented Bayard's name for nomination to the democratic national convention in 1884. He is well informed on international law and in all respects well fitted for whatever duties he may be called upon to perform as member of the permanent international tribunal of arbitration.

A NOTABLE REUNION. After Half a Century College Class Meets with Unbroken Ranks.

The old seventh form of Upper Canada college of 1852, says a Toronto paper, consisted of N. Walker, of Port Dover, head boy, now an M. D. of the same place; N. Kingsmill, of Niagara, now a Q. C. of Toronto; J. E. O'Reilly, of Hamilton, now master in chancery of the same place; C. W. Robinson, of Toronto, now a general in the British army, resident in England, and C. F. Gildersleeve, of Kingston, now general manager of the Richelieu & Ontario Navigation company, of Montreal. On the occasion of Gen. Robinson, who is a son of the late Sir John Beverley Robinson, chief justice, making a visit to this country, Mr. Kingsmill conceived the happy idea, and brought the old form together, with some of their contemporaries, at dinner at his residence, last evening, 48 years after they had separated as boys. Such a reunion, with unbroken ranks after half a century of life's vicissitudes, is a remarkable occurrence. These old boys seem quite proud of it—and well they may.

A NOVEL QUESTION.

How Long Can a Beheaded Man Live and Move?

Recently there has been much argument aiming to prove that the decapitation of criminals is the most cruel form possible of inflicting the death sentence. Some of the pronounced opponents of this form of capital punishment declared that the circulation of blood in the severed head did not cease for three hours, and that during that period the head could see, hear and smell. Dr. Wurm, a German expert, has felt moved to reply to these statements, says the New York Press. He says that he handled many heads of decapitated criminals, and that there is not the least doubt possible as to the fact of absolute death.

"Immediately after the execution," he says, "the heads were pale, entirely bloodless and absolutely without life. Not even reflex actions could be produced, and only for a short period could the galvanic current produce them. But a most interesting inquiry would be that of remaining spinal energy in the decapitated body. Beheaded frogs, chickens, ducks and even rabbits have been known to carry out independent movements, such as scratching of an irritated spot, jerking away an extremity when it was pinched and going through the motions of running, swimming and jumping. Apropos of this, Dr. Wurm quotes this queer tale in a book published in 1688 in Hamburg, entitled "Greater Things in the World, or So-Called Relations Curiosae."

"Emperor Ludwig, of Bavaria, in 1337 sentenced Sir Dietz, of Schauenburg, with four squires, to death for freebooting. At the place of execution Sir Dietz begged the judges to put him and his squires into a row, each man one foot from the next. Then he was to be executed first and his body would arise and run as far along the row of prisoners as he could. Each man whom he succeeded in passing was to be let free. The judges laughed and granted the request, saying that never before had they seen a beheaded man run. Thereupon Dietz put his men into a row, placing the one whom he liked the best nearest to him. Then he knelt, the sword fell and took his head off clean, and in the next instant the body had risen and was darting by the four men. It ran past them all and fell prone a few feet beyond the furthest one. Then the emperor pardoned the men as his judges had promised."

PASTIMES IN MODERATION.

Excess of Athletic Exercise Harmful to the Body.

A mild impeachment of sport is sometimes founded on the ailments induced by athletic exercise. Here again it is excess that is invariably to blame. Thus, says Chambers' Journal, rowing will soon find out a tendency to weak heart, but will not, I fancy, weaken a sound one. Dr. Morgan shows, in his University Oars, that Oxford and Cambridge rowing men survive the boat race by 40 years or more. Too much rowing may undoubtedly bring on staleness and lassitude; but all that is required to set matters right again is rest. Cycling will, if overdone, be productive of much discomfort. The cyclist who scorches and then slacks will catch cold, and the cyclist who rides too far will suffer fatigue and nervous worry. Sleeplessness, particularly after a bout of night riding, will follow the strain, always present, though not always consciously felt, of steering. It should, however, be borne in mind by those who none too fairly attribute the narrow-chestedness and curvity of spine seen in so many bicyclists to the pastime itself, that the cycling fraternity is largely recruited from the sedentary classes.

As for the much-discussed stooping attitude of the racing cyclist, it would be so difficult for him to race efficiently with compressed lungs that it may be questioned whether this position can affect the lungs in such a degree as alleged. Carelessness or excess in the cyclist may be supplemented by faults in the machine, and a badly-constructed or wrongly-adjusted saddle placed too far forward, may, I believe, especially in riding long distances on hard-roads, induce local irritation and injury.

What Makes a Good Wife.

Robert Burns, the poet, divided the scale of good wifeship into ten parts: Good nature, 4; good sense, 2; wit, 1; personal charms, 1. The remaining two degrees covered fortune, education, family, blood, etc.

What Would You Give

To be cured of catarrh? If you or your friends have this disease, you know how disagreeable it is. Its symptoms are inflamed eyes, throbbing temples, ringing noises in the ears, headaches, capricious appetite, and constant discharge of mucus. Fortunately its cure is not a question of what you will give, but what you will take. If you will take Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great constitutional remedy, which thoroughly purifies, enriches and vitalizes the blood, you may expect to be completely and permanently cured. The good blood which Hood's Sarsaparilla makes, reaching the delicate passages of the mucous membrane, soothes and rebuilds the tissues and ultimately cures all symptoms of catarrh.

BALLOON SIGNALS.

Interesting Experiments Recently Made—Dot and Dash System Used.

Rev. J. M. Bacon, of England, has invented a dot and dash system for the purposes of signaling from a balloon, and has recently been carrying out some interesting and exhaustive experiments from the car of a balloon to endeavor to establish communication with the earth beneath. He ascended, in company with two other aeronauts, to a height of 2,000 feet. Suspended at the end of a wire some 300 feet below the car was a large cracker, such as is employed in pyrotechnic displays. This cracker was fired from the car by the passage of an electric current. The aeronauts observed the flash and then timed the seconds that elapsed before the echo was heard. About five seconds passed and then reverberating rolls of thunder were distinguished, lasting some 20 seconds. The noise, owing to the clear, rarified atmosphere at that height, was deafening. The balloon, at a height of 6,500 feet, then drifted over Aldershot, and attempts were made to communicate with the military camp beneath. Slung below the car was a concertina-shaped contrivance, controlled from the car by strings. These were suddenly jerked in a manner similar to that in which a telegraph operator actuates his key, and loud, intermittent sounds were transmitted from the instrument. Owing to the tendency of sound to travel upward, some time elapsed before the signals reached the earth below, and then the soldiers transmitted their replies by means of the heliograph. Once the communication had been established, no difficulty was experienced in the transmission of the signals. The aeronauts, however, were puzzled somewhat in reading the bright heliograph flashes at that altitude, owing to the flashes following each other somewhat rapidly.—Scientific American.

CHARMING WOMAN

A man can very seldom tell what is passing in a woman's mind. He talks with another man and he can follow his processes; he gets his point of view; he can read between the lines; he can make a shrewd guess as to how he came to say that, or why he refrained from saying the other. But a woman's mental processes are not those of a man. Her mental machinery is geared differently. You hear what she tells you, and you only know what she tells you. You can make no inferences from it; they will be wrong, because you do not know how she came to say what she did; you do not have the clew. Try to guess what she will say next, and you will find that you are all at sea. The man who says that he understands women is himself a woman. No man can understand a woman. He may love her. There may exist between his soul and hers that indefinable and celestial sympathy which is the sweetest thing on earth; but he does not understand her. Her mental operations, her ways of thought, her point of view, will always be as inscrutable to him as the mental processes of an angel. Whether women understand each other is not quite certain. A great part of the delight that men find in the companionship of women arises from their inscrutability. You cannot measure or exhaust them. Their charming inconsequences, as they seem to you, will never cease to puzzle you, and every fresh conversation reveals a novelty of attitude or opinion.—Boston Watchman.

For Malaria, Chills and Fever. THE BEST PRESCRIPTION IS Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic. The formula is plainly printed on every bottle—hence you know just what you are taking when you take Grove's. Imitators do not advertise their formula knowing that you would not buy their medicine if you knew what it contained. Grove's contains Iron and Quinine put up in correct proportions and is in a Tasteless form. The Iron acts as a tonic while the Quinine drives the malaria out of the system. Any reliable druggist will tell you that Grove's is the Original and that all other so-called Tasteless Chill Tonics are imitations. An analysis of other chill tonics shows that Grove's is superior to all others in every respect. You are not experimenting when you take Grove's—its superiority and excellence having long been established. Grove's is the only Chill Cure sold throughout the entire malarial sections of the United States. No Cure, No Pay. Price, 50c.
